Executive Summary

Artisanal and Small Scale Mining (ASM) is a key sub sector in Uganda's extractives industry. This study conducted by Center for Research and Sustainable Solutions in July 2021 with support from Ministry of Finance, Planning and Economic Development and UG-EITI has assessed Uganda's ASM status, key issues and makes recommendations for enhancement of transparency and accountability in the sub-sector.

The overall study objective was to generate useful information and facilitate completion of activity 1.9 for the UG-EITI work plan. The specific objectives of this study included:

- 1) Undertaking a stakeholder mapping of ASM sub-sector and define the key actors and their role in the sub sector.
- 2) Highlighting the contribution of ASM to national revenues, including which minerals are mined in the ASM sector, and production data and trade data linked to their mining.
- 3) Highlighting the social and environmental impacts of ASM sub-sector in Uganda.

The study purpose consisted of the following:

1. Undertaking a scoping study to assess the level of available ASM specific data and information, key ASM issues of interest to EITI implementation, stakeholders and interested parties, institutions responsible for licensing and regulating ASM, licensing process, trading, locations and minerals, relevant information sources and suggestions on appropriate quality assurance processes for minimizing the cost of reporting.
2. Explore how ASM data can be feasibly included in the first EITI Report (noting the issue of 'proportionality'). Key areas of interest where the option of incorporating ASM information into EITI reporting needs to be clarified include reporting on the:
 - a. Legal framework and fiscal regime (2.1); Contract and license allocations (2.2); Register of licenses (2.3); Beneficial Ownership;
 - b. Disclosure of all payments (4.1); Sub-national payments (4.6); Level of disaggregation (4.7); Data timeliness (4.8); and Data quality and assurance (4.8);
 - c. Estimates of contribution to economy (6.3) [and sub-national economy], including employment numbers, production levels and exports; Social and Environmental impacts (6.4).
3. Develop recommendations, for improving the governance of the sub sector, which are likely to arise from the publication of ASM data and information to be taken up by UG-EITI and others (i.e. who are they and what are their interests? Who are the possible winners and losers from (1) increasing transparency in the sector; (2) contributing towards formalisation of the sector; and (3) sparking public debate and providing platforms for discussion?)

The study methodology aligned with COVID-19 prevention standard operating procedures (SOP's) and consisted of a desk based review of relevant ASM documentation coupled with a participatory remote consultation with key ASM stakeholders.

The key actors in ASM sub sector are:

- Ministry of Energy and Mineral Development through Directorate of Geological Survey and Mines which is the lead agency regulating ASM sub sector;
- Artisanal miners
- Local and national mining associations
- Civil society organizations
- District Local Governments
- Government ministries, departments and agencies
- Development partners

ASM production in Uganda currently concentrates on industrial minerals, including limestone, marble, vermiculite, aggregate, sand, clay, pozzolanic materials, salt and gypsum, as well as metallic ores, such as gold, tantalite, tin and wolfram. Gemstones, beryl, iron ore and magnesium are only marginally produced but they have notable potential for more advanced ASM exploitation in the future. With the exception of 'building minerals' (e.g. clay, sand, aggregate), which are extracted in most districts, mining of the other commodities is actually largely restricted to the southwest, central and eastern regions of the country.

The Ministry of Energy and Mineral Development through the Directorate of Geological Survey and Mines is the lead agency in the regulation of the ASM sub sector in Uganda. Uganda's mineral trade and production is governed through the Mining and Mineral Policy for Uganda, 2018, Mining Act, 2003 and Mining Regulations, 2018. The following acts also apply to the mining sector: The National Water Resources Regulations, 1998; The National Environmental Management Regulations, 2000; The National Environmental Regulations, 2001; The Occupational Health and Safety Act, 2006; The Employment Act, 2006. Additionally, the following policies also have some applicability to the mining sector: The National Gender Policy, 1997; The National Child Labour Policy, 2006; The National Action Plan on the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labour, 2012.

ASM sector plays an important role in local development – job creation from the sector was estimated at over 1 million direct and indirect jobs in 2018, benefitting approximately 10% of the country's population (Barreto et al., 2017b). ASM in Uganda is comprised of a spectrum of activities ranging from small, formal companies that employ some degree of mechanization to illegal subsistence miners – the majority of the sector - who employ simple tools for mineral extraction. Artisanal and small scale miners in Uganda are responsible for production of an estimated 100% of gemstones and more than 90% of metallic minerals, industrial minerals (e.g. gypsum, limestone, pozzolanic material) and other 'building minerals' in Uganda.

ASM produces a crucial source of much-needed employment and means to reduce rural-urban migration. Ugandan unemployment rates are 9.4% (8% men; 11% women), while underemployment due to lack of skills, time or income account for an additional 27.4% of the working age population¹¹¹. Direct employment in ASM is estimated at approximately 300,000 jobs, including approximately 40,000 in gold and 93,000 jobs in clay brick production. Notably, the latter is mainly created in peri-urban areas where, in poor households, only 6.5% of the population is employed. ASM is economically significant to more than 1 million Ugandans. Total direct jobs in ASM are estimated at 300,000 for all commodities (approximately 40% of which are women). Induced labour in the amount of an additional 750,000 jobs created through stimulation of local economies is estimated (Barreto et al., 2017b).

ASM continues to be mainly an informal sector and is not accounted for in the country's GDP calculation. Statistics suggest formal ASM operations have contributed UGX713.5 million to national revenues over the period 2014-2021. Nonetheless, efforts are underway to fully formalize all ASM operations through biometric registration of artisanal miners, issuance of identification cards and the promotion of mining associations.

The study recommends the following:

- UG-EITI is encouraged to formally engage Geological Survey and Mines Directorate to enter a memorandum of understanding to facilitate ASM data access, sharing and publication.
- Civil society organizations, mining associations and local government authorities actively support artisanal and small scale miners in their areas of operation. These key stakeholders are also potential sources of ASM related data and information. UG-EITI is encouraged to actively engage civil society organizations, mining associations and local government authorities in ASM areas to access their ASM relevant reports and data for analysis and inclusion of relevant data to EITI reporting. Nonetheless, extreme care be taken to ensure accuracy of the data and consistency with the official data at Geological Survey and Mines.
- Uganda is a member state of International Conference on Great Lakes Region (ICGLR) and has domesticated ICGLR protocol to end illegal exploitation of natural resources. The tools to implement this regional initiative to end illegal exploitation of natural resources includes promotion of extractives transparency initiative (EITI) and formalization of artisanal and small scale mining. UG-EITI is encouraged to exploit this mechanism to create data sharing and publishing protocol with Geological Survey and Mines through the ongoing review and amendments to the Mining laws and regulations to accommodate such international statutes and conventions.

- Ongoing ASM formalization through biometric registration of artisanal miners, issuance of identification cards and promotion of mining associations should be continued and completed to achieve full integration of ASM activities and their contribution into the national economy.

1. Introduction

On 28th January 2019, Cabinet approved Uganda to join Extractive International Transparency Initiative (EITI) as a means to encourage investment by increasing awareness and strengthening petroleum and mining sector oversight. Through implementing EITI, Uganda is expected to promote: 1. Transparency: Through disclosing information on the management of the extractive sector alongside the reconciliation of company payments and government receipts; and 2. Accountability: By embracing a multi-stakeholder group (MSG) approach comprising of representatives from government, companies and civil society to oversee disclosure process, communicate findings, act upon recommendations and promote integration of EITI into other transparency and reform efforts in Uganda.

Artisanal and Small Scale Mining (ASM) is a key sub sector in Uganda's extractives industry. This study conducted by Center for Research and Sustainable Solutions in July 2021 with support from Ministry of Finance, Planning and Economic Development and UG-EITI has assessed Uganda's ASM status, key issues and makes recommendations for enhancement of transparency and accountability in the sub-sector.

The overall study objective was to generate useful information and facilitate completion of activity 1.9 for the UG-EITI work plan. The specific objectives of this study included:

- 4) Undertaking a stakeholder mapping of ASM sub-sector and define the key actors and their role in the sub sector.
- 5) Highlighting the contribution of ASM to national revenues, including which minerals are mined in the ASM sector, and production data and trade data linked to their mining.
- 6) Highlighting the social and environmental impacts of ASM sub-sector in Uganda.

This report further presents a detailed analysis of sub sector legal and policy framework, key issues and a review of analytical work so far done.

1.1. Purpose of the Study

The study purpose consisted of the following:

4. Undertaking a scoping study to assess the level of available ASM specific data and information, key ASM issues of interest to EITI implementation, stakeholders and interested parties, institutions responsible for licensing and regulating ASM, licensing process, trading, locations and minerals, relevant information sources and suggestions on appropriate quality assurance processes for minimizing the cost of reporting.

5. Explore how ASM data can be feasibly included in the first EITI Report (noting the issue of 'proportionality'). Key areas of interest where the option of incorporating ASM information into EITI reporting needs to be clarified include reporting on the:
 - a. Legal framework and fiscal regime (2.1); Contract and license allocations (2.2); Register of licenses (2.3); Beneficial Ownership;
 - b. Disclosure of all payments (4.1); Sub-national payments (4.6); Level of disaggregation (4.7); Data timeliness (4.8); and Data quality and assurance (4.8);
 - c. Estimates of contribution to economy (6.3) [and sub-national economy], including employment numbers, production levels and exports; Social and Environmental impacts (6.4).

6. Develop recommendations, for improving the governance of the sub sector, which are likely to arise from the publication of ASM data and information to be taken up by UG-EITI and others (i.e. who are they and what are their interests? Who are the possible winners and losers from (1) increasing transparency in the sector; (2) contributing towards formalisation of the sector; and (3) sparking public debate and providing platforms for discussion?)

1.2. Methodology

The study methodology aligned with COVID-19 prevention standard operating procedures (SOP's) and consisted of desk based review of relevant ASM documentation coupled with a participatory remote consultation and key informant interviews with ASM stakeholders.

1.2.1 Limitations

COVID-19 pandemic was the major limitation during the ASM stakeholder mapping. Specifically, a 42 days COVID-19 lockdown limited the consultant's ability to conduct physical interviews with ASM stakeholders. Nonetheless, stakeholder consultations were remotely conducted with key stakeholders such as Geological Survey and Mines Directorate.

2. The ASM Context in Uganda

2.1. ASM Sub Sector Overview

The ASM sector plays an important role in local development – job creation from the sector was estimated at over 1 million direct and indirect jobs in 2018, benefitting approximately 10% of the country's population (Barreto et al., 2017b). ASM in Uganda is comprised of a spectrum of activities ranging from small, formal companies that employ some degree of mechanization to illegal subsistence miners – the majority of the sector - who employ simple tools for mineral extraction. Artisanal and small scale miners in Uganda are responsible for production of an estimated 100% of gemstones and more than 90% of metallic minerals, industrial minerals (e.g. gypsum, limestone, pozzolanic material) and other 'building minerals' in Uganda.

ASM production in Uganda currently concentrates on industrial minerals, including limestone, marble, vermiculite, aggregate, sand, clay, pozzolanic materials, salt and gypsum, as well as metallic ores, such as gold, tantalite, tin and wolfram. Gemstones, beryl, iron ore and magnesium are only marginally produced but they have notable potential for more advanced ASM exploitation in the future. With the exception of 'building minerals' (e.g. clay, sand, aggregate), which are extracted in most districts, mining of the other commodities is actually largely restricted to the southwest, central and eastern regions of the country.

ASM generates an important source of employment and revenue to local economies and increases local purchasing power and demands for locally produced goods (e.g. tools, food, housing, infrastructure). Considerable improvements can still be made in terms of the contribution of the sector to economic development. Poor performance is mainly attributed to inefficient and unsustainable mining practices, high rates of illegality, lack of awareness on the part of many miners, exploitative mineral trading practices and underdeveloped linkages with other economic activities. In addition, the rudimentary mining methods used by both legal and illegal miners continue to create short- and potentially long-term risks to environmental and human health in affected communities.

In the following the main problems of the ASM sector are listed:

- Lack of organization;
- Illegal miners and problems in the legalization process;
- Widespread use of inefficient and labour intensive mining methods leading to low economic returns, environmental degradation and occupational health and safety risks;
- Participation of children which leads to the worst form of child labour;
- Poor sanitation and hygiene conditions increasing the risk of communicable diseases in ASM communities;
- HIV/AIDS in ASM communities;
- Lack of access to fair markets and financing mechanisms;
- Exploitation of illegal miners by mineral buyers or legal miners;
- Tensions between legal and illegal miners concerning overlapping interests in land already held under concession;
- Exclusion of "building minerals" from the jurisdiction of authorities who are best-equipped to support and monitor these activities;
- Resource limitations of government authorities to monitor and enforce ASM-related legislation;

- Lack of coordination with other sectors, particularly with respect to the environment, occupational health and safety, community health;
- Exclusion of ASM from local, regional and national economic development and poverty alleviation strategies;
- Exclusion of ASM from the donor agenda

Recent ASM formalisation initiatives and incentives include biometric registration of artisanal miners, the issuing of identification cards and the promotion of mining associations, as well as discussions on the lifting of mineral royalties from the ASM sector. The minerals related to ASM activities in Uganda are further described below.

ASM Gold Mining

The most important ASM gold areas are the Busia Goldfield, Mubende Goldfield, Karamoja Goldfield and Buhweju Goldfield. These are major sources of gold production in Uganda. The majority of rural households in these areas are engaged in gold mining or processing, either on a full-time or part-time basis. Gold mining in these areas includes underground workings and surface mining of both alluvial and hard rock ores. Generally, shafts are sunk until the gold-enriched unit is encountered, and then is followed laterally, while in the case of pitting, seams may be followed until pit walls collapse - in either case fatalities are frequent.

The gold mining activities are highly manual and, with the exception of the occasional stamp-mill, crushing and grinding is largely done with hammers or steel mortars with steel or laterite pestles and in some cases with locally fabricated ball mills. As well, mercury use is abundant and few precautions are taken to reduce its discharge into waterways or the atmosphere. Generally, the process involves both manual and semi-mechanized crushing and milling of ore and subsequent hand-amalgamation with mercury in basins or shallow pools. Washing removes most fines and the remaining amalgam is burnt in open-air, often in close proximity to children.

Other problems include the rampant deforestation, river silting, pollution of river systems with mercury, poor sanitation and waste disposal across ASM sites. The gender-based division of labour has not been ascertained for most ASM sites, but few women are involved in mining, mainly working as panners or handpickers.

ASM Building Minerals Production

Building Minerals Production are the main source of construction material serving urban centres with clay, sand, aggregate, and dimension stones. They are found along roadways near to towns and cities throughout Uganda. Classified as 'building minerals' in the Mining Act (2003), the employment and production levels of these commodities likely exceeds that of all other minerals in Uganda combined. The majority of these operations are unregistered or registered with local governments. They are generally taxed and supervised by local authorities who have little expertise in mining. Linked with the informality of operations are lack market knowledge and trade through middle men, resulting in disadvantageous selling prices. Borrow pits from sand mining are found along waterways and in wetlands throughout Uganda. The total numbers of sand miners in Uganda and their production rates have not been determined.

Granite, gneiss, quartzite and sandstone and clay quarries are mainly found along the highways adjacent to Ugandan cities, in particular Kampala, Wakiso, Mukono, Gulu, Mubende, Mbale, Tororo and Kumi etc. With little consideration of stability issues, steep-walled quarries are excavated using equipment ranging from simple shovels, hammers, crowbars and wheelbarrows to blasting with explosives in the case of aggregate production from hard rock. In some cases, narrow pits as deep as 12m infringe upon road shoulders, presenting a hazard to both miners and road users. Despite the poor incomes derived from this activities (typically far less than 1000 US$ per day) and frequent injuries and fatalities due primarily to rockfalls and pit wall collapses, building mineral quarries are nevertheless an important source of employment in Uganda. In some quarrying regions of Uganda, the notable absence of cultivated fields has been interpreted as a testament to the widespread preference for rock quarrying over other economic activities. In the building mineral subsector, it has been estimated that ~50% of the workforce is comprised of women.

ASM Salt Production

The ASM salt production is mainly located at Lake Katwe in Kasese District in Western Uganda. Katwe Salt Works, on the shallow Katwe saline lake (1300m in Diameter, <2m depth; ~2.5 km² area) adjacent to Lake Edward in Queen Elizabeth National Park (QENP). It is estimated that more than 12,500 miners are actively involved in salt mining and trading in Katwe during the peak seasons, a number which decreases by 30-80% in the rainy season. This includes women, men and children who, in particular, come to the salt mines after school and on weekends, while in primary. Salt mining is the largest income earner for the local government. Although not formally licensed as a mine, Katwe traders pay the local town council a levy of 500 US$ per 70 kg bag of precipitated salt and 300 US$ per 50 kg bag of rock salt.

Salt is produced from more than 2,000 individual salt pans, which are shored by wooden stakes and woven grass and are linked to Lake Katwe via a series of channels and trenches. The process involves forcing water by hand into the pans and then manually collecting the precipitated salt as the water evaporates. A portion of the salt produced is washed by manual trampling in a plastic basin, followed by decanting of impurities resulting in an end product saleable for treatment of animal skins. In addition, salt is harvested by ~150 miners as large crystallized slabs which are pried from the lake bottom and rafted to shore. The environmental impacts from salt mining are limited at Katwe, although the poaching of trees to make rafts for transporting rock salt on the water presents some cause for concern for the QENP. Other environmental concerns include improper waste disposal (Sanitation concerns), soil erosion, siltation of water bodies, high HIV/AIDS prevalence rate etc.

Although more than 50% of the Lake Katwe workforce is female, in 1993, only 60 out of 2220 salt pans were owned by women. The gender differentiation in labour is observed in mining activities (where women mainly work in the salt pans in groups of 8 to 20 people, while men work in the deeper water prying salt slabs from the lake bottom) as well as in the salt trade, where only 30 of 130 dealers are female. As the primary source of employment for women in the region and the main source of support for ~90% of the local population, Katwe Salt Works also employs an additional 300 women in peripheral positions, such as in the provision of food and other goods and services (Harben, 1993). As a consequence of prolonged exposure to saline water, the workforce endures harsh working conditions and serious health problems, including skin and reproductive problems. Local miners and the District Council have attributed the high rate of miscarriages among pregnant salt miners to exposure during harvesting seasons.

In the early 1990's, total production at Katwe was estimated to be between 8500 and 12,000 tons per annum. At this time, the price of salt ranged between USH 2,100/bag in the dry season and USH 17,500/bag in the wet season when productivity declined. The variation in productivity continues to result in a seasonal swelling of the local population by as much as 30%. Barriers to increased incomes for the salt miners include the lack of a salt containment facility (for wet season storage), reliance on prices offered by transportation-equipped traders and low technology resulting in mainly animal and industrial grade salt production.

2.2 ASM Legal Framework

The Ministry of Energy and Mineral Development through the Directorate of Geological Survey and Mines is the lead agency in the regulation of the ASM sub sector in Uganda. Uganda's mineral trade and production is governed through the Mining and Mineral Policy for Uganda, 2018, Mining Act, 2003 and Mining Regulations, 2018. In May 2018, a new Mining and Mineral Policy was approved by the cabinet, aimed at providing a foundation upon which sector legislation could be built in response to gaps in the 2003 and 2004 Act and Regulations. The recent reported passing of the Mining Amendment Act of 2021, which came into force on 1st July 2021, is a significant step in the development of the Uganda ASM sub sector. It introduces export levies on both processed and unprocessed minerals, significantly shifting the regulatory environment for mineral exports in the country and providing a potential release valve – albeit a costly one – to the reported ban on the export of unprocessed minerals.

In general, ASM mining rights fall in the category of location license which is a preserve of Ugandan citizens or companies where Ugandans hold the majority stake. An overview of the taxes, mineral production and trade applicable to ASM in Uganda is given in Table 1.

Table 1: Overview of the taxes, mineral production and trade applicable to ASM

Specific to ASM sector:
Mineral royalties. Uganda levies a mineral royalty of 5% of the production value of all minerals produced in the country, payable upon declaration to the DGSM. Royalty revenues are shared between the Central Government (80%); local government and the local administrative jurisdiction where the mining is taking place (17%); and the landowner (3%).
Mineral production and trade. Mineral production and trade in Uganda are governed by the Mining Act 2003 and Mining Regulations 2004. They include fees for mining licenses, annual mineral rent and trading licenses (trading licenses are categorised for base metals and precious metals). For the ASM sector, it is necessary to obtain a prospecting license for exploration (granted per year), a location license (granted for two years renewable).

Mineral export levies. The 2021 Mining Amendment Act reportedly imposes export levies on both processed and unprocessed mineral exports, payable by the exporter to the URA. These amendments, which come into force on 1st July 2021, introduce an export levy of 5% of the value of each kg of processed gold exported, or 10% of the gross value of unprocessed minerals (The Republic of Uganda, 2021).

Applicable to mining and minerals sector:

General business taxes. ASM businesses like other businesses are subject to the payment of taxes. The mining companies/cooperatives, mineral traders have the obligations to declare and pay their taxes in accordance with the relevant laws. The general taxes include Corporation Tax, Value Added Tax (VAT), Pay as You Earn (PAYE), Contributions to the National Social Security Fund (NSSF), and Local Services tax, payable to local government.

The following acts also apply to the mining sector: The National Water Resources Regulations, 1998; The National Environmental Management Regulations, 2000; The National Environmental Regulations, 2001; The Occupational Health and Safety Act, 2006; The Employment Act, 2006. Additionally, the following policies also have some applicability to the mining sector: The National Gender Policy, 1997; The National Child Labour Policy, 2006; The National Action Plan on the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labour, 2012.

2.3 ASM Stakeholders and Roles

3. ASM Data Sources and EITI Reporting

The Ministry of Energy and Mineral Development through Geological Survey and Mines Directorate is the principal depository of all mining related information and data. This makes DGSM the sole lead agency for all aspects on mining geodata, licensing and regulation in Uganda. All data and information pertaining to mining, and ASM to be specific, can be formally accessed through Directorate of Geological Survey and Mines.

UG-EITI is encouraged to formally engage Geological Survey and Mines Directorate to enter a memorandum of understanding (MoU) to facilitate ASM data access, sharing and publication.

Civil society organizations, mining associations and local government authorities actively support artisanal and small scale miners in their areas of operation. These key stakeholders are also potential sources of ASM related data and information. UG-EITI is encouraged to actively engage civil society organizations, mining associations and local government authorities in ASM areas to access their ASM relevant reports and data for analysis and inclusion of relevant data to EITI reporting. Nonetheless, extreme care should be taken to ensure accuracy of the data and consistency with the official data at Geological Survey and Mines.

Uganda is a member state of International Conference on Great Lakes Region (ICGLR) and has domesticated ICGLR protocol to end illegal exploitation of natural resources. The tools to implement this regional initiative to end illegal exploitation of natural resources includes promotion of extractives transparency initiative (EITI) and formalization of artisanal and small scale mining. UG-EITI is encouraged to exploit this mechanism to create data sharing and publishing protocol with Geological Survey and Mines through the ongoing review and amendments to the Mining laws and regulations to accommodate such international statutes and conventions.

4. Economic Contributions of ASM

ASM sector plays an important role in local development – job creation from the sector was estimated at over 1 million direct and indirect jobs in 2018, benefitting approximately 10% of the country's population (Barreto et al., 2017b). ASM in Uganda is comprised of a spectrum of activities ranging from small, formal companies that employ some degree of mechanization to illegal subsistence miners – the majority of the sector - who employ simple tools for mineral extraction. Artisanal and small scale miners in Uganda are responsible for production of an estimated 100% of gemstones and more than 90% of metallic minerals, industrial minerals (e.g. gypsum, limestone, pozzolanic material) and other 'building minerals' in Uganda.

ASM produces a crucial source of much-needed employment and means to reduce rural-urban migration. Ugandan unemployment rates are 9.4% (8% men; 11% women), while underemployment due to lack of skills, time or income account for an additional 27.4% of the working age population. Direct employment in ASM is estimated at approximately 300,000 jobs, including approximately 40,000 in gold and 93,000 jobs in clay brick production. Notably, the latter is mainly created in peri-urban areas where, in poor households, only 6.5% of the population is employed. ASM is economically significant to more than 1 million Ugandans. Total direct jobs in ASM are estimated at 300,000 for all commodities (approximately 40% of which are women). Induced labour in the amount of an additional 750,000 jobs created through stimulation of local economies is estimated (Barreto et al., 2017b).

ASM continues to be mainly an informal sector and is not accounted for in the country's GDP calculation. Nonetheless, efforts are underway to fully formalize ASM through biometric registration of artisanal miners, issuance of identification cards and the promotion of mining associations. The official data on contribution of ASM to national revenues for the period 2014-2021 is summarised in Table 4. A detailed breakdown of the revenue contribution is highlighted in Annex 1.

5. Conclusions and Recommendations

The study recommends the following:

- UG-EITI is encouraged to formally engage Geological Survey and Mines Directorate to enter a memorandum of understanding to facilitate ASM data access, sharing and publication.
- Civil society organizations, mining associations and local government authorities actively support artisanal and small scale miners in their areas of operation. These key stakeholders are also potential sources of ASM related data and information. UG-EITI is encouraged to actively engage civil society organizations, mining associations and local government authorities in ASM areas to access their ASM relevant reports and data for analysis and inclusion of relevant data to EITI reporting. Nonetheless, extreme care and caution be taken to ensure accuracy of the data and consistency with the official data at Geological Survey and Mines.
- Uganda is a member state of International Conference on Great Lakes Region (ICGLR) and has domesticated ICGLR protocol to end illegal exploitation of natural resources. The tools to implement this regional initiative to end illegal exploitation of natural resources includes promotion of extractives transparency initiative (EITI) and formalization of artisanal and small scale mining. UG-EITI is encouraged to exploit this mechanism to create data sharing and publishing protocol with Geological Survey and Mines through the ongoing review and amendments to the Mining laws and regulations that intends to accommodate international mining related statutes.
- Ongoing ASM formalization through biometric registration of artisanal miners, issuance of identification cards and promotion of mining associations should be continued and completed to achieve full integration of ASM activities and their contribution into the national economy.
